

FRENCH CHEF SERVES M'NAMARA JURORS

Just Lunch.

Oyster stew

Sole

Stuffed peppers

Ripe olives

Fried spring chicken

Pommes Parisienne

Petits pois Francaise

Corn on cob

Ice cream in colors

American and Swiss cheese

Assorted cakes

Cafe Noir

Assorted fruits

Cigars

Los Angeles, Nov. 2.—With a private French chef, who once reigned in the kitchen of M. Felix Faure, former president of France, at their disposal, veniremen in the McNamara case under detention by the court are living on the fat of the land.

The only trouble so far encountered has been that M. Dupree, whose culinary skill once delighted a chief executive of the biggest republic of continental Europe, insists on putting at least few of his pet dishes on the menu and recording them in his native language. The result—one of the veniremen has succeeded in getting potatoes in five different styles with a single order, while failing to get the meat he thought he ordered.

A big sight-seeing automobile takes the men from the court to the hotel, and then, while the deputies gather on each side to have the veniremen pass directly into the structure and the dining room which has been fitted up for their absolute use.

There are four waitresses assigned to wait on the men, but under the order of the court they must not talk.

BIG LAYOUT AT WORLD'S EGG-LAYING CONTEST

Storrs, Conn., Nov. 2.—The world's championship egg-laying contest started yesterday at the Connecticut Agricultural College. Five hundred biddies, representing thirteen states, provinces in Canada and one English poultry yard, are entered. Each team of five has a substitute, to be used in case of death or disability.

There will be no roosters present during the year's laying. Experts say roosters are not necessary anyway to egg laying, and that they cause eggs to decay more quickly.

$2,000 in prizes has been offered the winners.

Mrs. Hen will be given every opportunity to break all records for such contests, the like of which are common in Europe. The best poultry experts in the country have co-operated in the construction of the buildings and the ground arrangements. Mrs. Hen will receive the best of board.

Among the interesting entries are a delegation of Rhode Island Reds from the Trappist Monks at La Trappe, Quebec, and a company of White Leghorns from Catsworth, England.